

JUNIUS JOHNSON ACADEMICS

Sub Arboribus

Sub Arboribus is a month-long intensive Latin experience offered via direct instruction over Zoom. This course, intended for adults (college and up) who have completed a complete course of Latin grammar, aims to move the student from familiarity to facility with the system of Latin grammar. At the same time, it aims to inspire a love of Latin that allows one to see beyond the structural features of Latin to its living beauty. Through translation, composition, and structural analysis, students will develop a deep and rich understanding not only of Latin grammar, but also of Latin logic.

Ideal for graduate students seeking to improve their Latin for their research and for instructors of Latin at the secondary level, this 4 week class will run Mondays through Thursdays from June 7th to July 1st. Tuition is only $500 per student. Registration is open now, and will continue until May 28th.

About the Instructor

Dr. Junius Johnson (PhD, Yale University) is internationally recognized as a leading Latinist and a dynamic teacher. An accomplished linguist proficient in twelve languages, Dr. Johnson studied Latin at the Vatican with the late Fr. Reginald Foster, architect of many of the Vatican's Latin documents in the second half of the twentieth century and widely regarded as one of the greatest modern Latinists. As a Lecturer in Ecclesiastical Latin at the masters and doctoral level at Yale University for nearly a decade, Dr. Johnson's former students include some of the brightest and most accomplished young scholars working today. His translations have appeared in books by Yale University Press and numerous scholarly journals, have been set to music, and have even been used in Hollywood. He is the author of four books, including Bonaventure On The Eucharist: Commentary on the Sentences, Book IV, dist. 8-13, (Dallas Medieval Texts and Translations 23, Louvain: Peeters Press, 2017), an English translation of an important Medieval Latin liturgical text.
